(Bonney, From Times Wide World.)

ON the hill above Rheims, France, overlooking the city, with its towering, world-famed cathedral and the sea of new buildings replacing those which the war destroyed, stands a new rose-colored stucco building surrounded by gardens in the making. It is the American Memorial Hospital for Children, created and endowed almost entirely by American contributions and presented to the Mayor of Rheims by Ambassador Herrick on behalf of his compatriots.

At the end of the war, the American Fund for French Wounded and the Women's Hospital Unit found that funds remained unspent. They first thought of building a hospital near Nancy, but there was already such an institution there, and they were asked by the French Government to come to Rheims, where there was much suffering as the families returned to their demolished homes.

How urgent was the need was proved by the fact that in the temporary hospital, first installed in 1919, 1,690 babies were born. Since then the work has broadened, and the permanent structure, built from the funds on hand and donations that have poured in liberally from all parts of the United States, is the result.

The hospital was built on the plans of Charles Butler, the well-known New York architect, who gave them as his contribution toward the project. It is superbly equipped with the latest devices for sanitation and disinfection and is flooded with fresh air and sunshine. In the playrooms for convalescent children there are gay frescoes, painted as his gift to the hospital by St. Hubert, the eminent French artist, lovely in tone, happy in atmosphere and so constructed that they can be washed and disinfected as well as plain walls.

"GOOD WORK, OLD TOP": SIR SEFTON BRANCKER, Air Vice Marshal of Great Britain, Congratulating Fokker, the Dutch Airplane Expert, on a Daring Exhibition He Gave at Croydon With a Machine Claimed to Be Virtually Crashproof. (Times Wide World Photos.)

AN eminently successful series of tests recently carried out at Croydon Aerodrome, England, marked a great advance in aviation and promised the elimination of many accidents that have made flying perilous.

Anthony Fokker, the noted inventor, with a machine designed and flown by himself, carrying eight passengers in the cabin, was the principal figure in the tests. His plane was so constructed that unless forced into a stall it would not pass a critical angle. When the flying speed dropped to a minimum the machine gently put down its nose and so recovered the margin of speed, retaining throughout the whole period an adequate lateral control. He brought the plane up to position immediately on the stall, and the craft, after hanging in the air, rolled a little and gradually came down into a normal flying position again. His end is said to have been attained not by revolutionary means, but by construction of the wing, which is very thick in the centre and greatly tapered at the ends, and by careful refinement of the controls.

A second demonstration was given at the same time of the British effort to retain control of the machine after stalling, and in this an avro was used fitted with a Handley-Page slotted wing worked in conjunction with interconnected ailerons. As stalling is the main cause of crashes, the success of the test was extremely gratifying to officials of the British Air Service.

A COLLEGE WIZARD OF THE BOX:
OWEN T. CARROLL,
Captain and Pitcher of the Holy Cross
Team, Whose Work on the Mound Has Been the Sensation of the College Baseball Season.
(Times Wide World Photos.)

OWEN CARROLL, a Newark boy, now captain and pitcher of the Holy Cross College baseball team, who, recognized authorities say, stands head and shoulders above any other college pitcher in the game, still manages to put three strikes over the plate in spite of the fact that he is the leading character in a stormy baseball controversy.

"Ownie" proved a sensation in his work on the mound in 1924, and has outdone his last season's record already this season. In a recent game with William and Mary he struck out enough players to make up two ball nines. In one week he faced both Yale and Dartmouth, and, with the bases full in these two instances, he fanned out three men in succession.

When he was a freshman in Holy Cross he signed some sort of an agreement that if he should decide to play professional ball he would play with the Detroit club. But Carroll now finds that he can write his own terms if he can get away from the Tigers. Both the Giants and the Cubs are willing to give him a big bonus and a long-term contract. "Ownie" favors the Giants.

Carroll has put the matter before Commissioner Landis and has asked him to set aside the contract binding Carroll to Detroit. In his plea to Landis, "Ownie" says that he was a minor when he signed the Detroit papers and hardly knew what he was doing. At the same time he declares that he will not enter professional baseball unless he can play with the team of his choice.

THE annual celebration at San Antonio of the battle of San Jacinto, by which Texas won her independence from Mexico, and the brilliant pageant of the coronation of the Queen of the fiesta attended by her court are the leading social and civic events of the year in Southwest Texas.

This year the fiesta was a Court of Sylvan Flowers when Her Majesty Estelle, attended by eleven prominent young women of the city representing various wild flowers for which Texas is famous, was crowned Queen of the Spring Carnival in a particularly colorful pageant. Each Duchess was escorted by a Knight of the Order of the Alamo in court costume of powdered wig and satin knee-breeches and was attended by a small girl or boy dressed to represent butterflies, dragon flies, white moths, grasshoppers and crickets. The elaborate coronation ceremonies and the Queen's Ball the following evening were staged by the Order of the Alamo, while the Battle of Flowers the afternoon following the coronation, when each member of the court and her attendants rode in a magnificent float, was arranged by the Battle of Flowers Association. The parade, which was more than a mile long, paused to do homage before the historic Alamo on the central plaza of the city.

BEST BRAIN TEASERS WIN CASH PRIZES EVERY WEEK

FOR the best original contribution printed on this page each week a prize of $15 in cash will be awarded. For the next best contribution a prize of $10 will be awarded. For each additional contribution published on this page The Mid-Week Pictorial will pay $5.

Each contributor should state that to his best knowledge and belief his contribution has not hitherto been printed in its present form. Answers or solutions must accompany each contribution.

The contest is open to every one except employees of The New York Times Company, and it is not necessary to purchase a copy of The Mid-Week Pictorial, as the magazine may be inspected at any business office of The New York Times Company and at the many public libraries where it is on file.

The decisions of the Editor will be made largely on the originality and cleverness of the contribution, and in every case shall be final.

All contributions should be addressed to
THE SPHINX EDITOR, MID-WEEK PICTORIAL,

229 West 43d St., New York, N. Y.

5—Floral Anagrams.

Each of the following represents the name of a flower. Can you tell what they are?

LOOP IT HERE PRIME CELL ENTRAPS
AH GRAY END THINE REGAL BED
NOT MEETING HYMN MET A CRUSH
GAUL IS OLD I TRUST U MAN
FILL YE HEAVY TOLL WAIL MET LEWIS

—Five dollars awarded to Roy J. Sawyer, 419 West Fourth Street, Covington, Ky.

6—The Spelling Clowns.

I once went to a circus and there I saw five clowns, each with a different letter on his chest. They would mix themselves up, and at the end of every scramble they would appear in a straight line, each time spelling a different word. They did this until they spelled four words in four different straight lines. Can you put the four words together?

—Five dollars awarded to Private Harry U. Duvall, United States Army Recruiting Station, 1 North Holliday Street, Baltimore, Md.

7—Transposition.

Place six coins at right angles, as shown in the above diagram. Then shift only one of the coins in any manner you wish, so as to form two straight rows, each row to contain four coins.

8—Problem.

A train which is one mile long is at the end of a track ten miles long. A man at the rear of the last car starts to walk toward the engine when the train starts. The train runs the entire length of the track, and when it has finished its run the man has walked through all the cars to the front of the engine, a distance of one mile. How far did he ride?

—Five dollars awarded to Caroline Cox, 309 Dolphin Street, Baltimore, Md.

9—Verbal Addition.

Synonyms of the following words added together as indicated will make a composite word that is not related to its components:

- 1—Textile fabric having corded surface plus a delicate network of threads equals to substitute.
- 2—Draw nigh plus expires equals dramatic representations of amusing incidents.
- 3—A minor devil plus a deed equals collision.
- 4—To place plus to free equals rotten.
- 5—Within plus excavate plus tribe or people equals just resentment.

—Five dollars awarded to Israel Goldstein, 175 Blake Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

10—Hidden Lessons.

Find the names of fourteen subjects that are studied in schools in the following:

This Tory stopped. "Agog your plan is! Geo! Graph your scheme. Don't forget the teachings of the Gospel. Lingering Indians must not trim us. Ice and food are necessary for the soldiers. Peel a tin of potatoes for them. Don't you agree kale and cold slaw are good for them too? After they eat tell them to bring the gold of Montana to my house and give it to the abbot. Any Indian will tell them where the sachem is. Try this program. Marshal your troops, Geo. Lo! Gymnastics will win the day. There! A-ding goes the bell."

—Five dollars awarded to Frances Dykes, Madison Place, Ridgewood, N. J.

Answers to these "Brain Teasers" will be published next week. Answers to last week's appear on Page 25.

READER-MADE CROSS-WORD PUZZLES THAT WIN CASH PRIZES

By Carolyn Wells, Cross-Word Puzzle Editor

THE Prize Winners this week devoted their energies to omitting two-letter words and abbreviations. This, somehow, seemed to bring about quite a lot of unkeyed letters, but as they are all readily discernible, the puzzles are not too difficult.

With the next number of the Mid-Week Pictorial, that of May 14th, the cross-word puzzle contest, which began with the Christmas issue of 1924, will be discontinued.

In addition to those who have enjoyed solving the puzzles, Mid-Week Pictorial readers in every state in the Union, in Mexico, Panama, Cuba, Porto Rico, and other countries, have participated in constructing the puzzles, many of which have been clever and ingenious to a high degree, making the award of prizes difficult and the winning of them an honor.

And the words are largely garnered from the pages of the Mid-Week Pictorial.

Also, the number of black squares is surprisingly small. Get busy on them—they are good puzzles.

For the best cross-word puzzle constructed each week on the cover-to-cover contents of the Mid-Week Pictorial a prize of twenty-five dollars in cash is offered. For the next best cross-word puzzle so constructed a prize of fifteen dollars in cash is offered.

The Conditions

The puzzle should be based as far as possible on the words and pictures used in the Mid-Week Pictorial of the current week, and may include any word or any picture on the editorial or advertisement pages. The award of the prizes will, in a measure, be determined by the cleverness and extent to which the words and pictorial suggestions are turned to good account, and the puzzle completed with the smallest possible help drawn from any sources other than the magazine itself. It should be stated how many words are taken from the magazine. No puzzle can be considered unless received within three weeks of the date of the issue on which it is based. General excellence of the puzzle "as a puzzle"—in the opinion of our editor, will also be a factor in selection.

Each puzzle should be so constructed that while its solution will be aided by Page Twenty-four having at hand a copy of the magazine on which it is based, this will not be necessary because of obscure or far-fetched references.

Contestants may draw their puzzles on any suitable paper and attach thereto the phrases employed, their numbers and the solution. The names of the prize winners as well as the prize-winning puzzles will be published on this page as soon as possible after the award. Names and addresses should be printed or very plainly written.

The contest is open to every one except employees of The New York Times Company, publishers of this magazine. The determination of the prize-winning puzzles shall be made by the Puzzle Editor of the Mid-Week Pictorial.

It is not necessary to purchase a copy of the Mid-Week Pictorial in order to enter the contest, as it may be inspected without charge at any business office of The New York Times Company, or at many public libraries where it is on file.

SIDNEY HOWARD'S PLAY THAT WON THE PULITZER PRIZE

A Scene From "They Knew What They Wanted," at the Klaw Theatre.

TONY (Richard Bennett), an Italian wine-grower in California, recovering from an accident which broke both his legs, is chatting with his young I. W. W. foreman, Joe (Glenn Anders), and the parish priest, Father McKee (Charles Kennedy). Three months before he had got a wife by correspondence, Amy (Pauline Lord), a waitress in a San Francisco restaurant.

FATHER MCKEE—Now, Joe, don't be tryin' to tell me that things is goin' to be any better for havin' a revolushun, because they ain't. Gover'ment's always gover'ment, no matter what you call it, an' no partic'lar kind of gover'ment ain't no more'n't a label, anyway. You don't change nothin' by givin' it a new name. Stick a "peppermint" label on a bottle of castor oil an' then drink it an' see what happens to you. Castor oil happens!

TONY—I am work' jus' as much lik' Joe an' I don' wan' changin' nothin'.

JOE—I suppose you both come over here in the first place because you were satisfied with everything just like it was in the old country.

TONY—People comin' in da Unita State' because ees good place. I been comin' for mak' money. * * *

JOE—You're a capitalist, that's what you are.

TONY—You mak' me tire', Joe. Evra minute talk' 'bout Russia—Russia—Tak' a pinch of snuff an' shut up. I been 'Merican citizen for twent' year'. I been vote ev'ry year, sometimes two times. Ees fine thing, vote'. I lik'. * * * (Father McKee has risen and is looking at Joe's papers.)

JOE—I'll just trouble you for those papers, Padre.

FATHER MCKEE—If you take my advice ye'll burn 'em.

TONY—Joe don' mean no 'arm.

JOE—Whatever I mean, there ain't nobody 'round here I aim to bother. An' maybe I don't mean nothin' at all. Maybe I'm just restless an' rarin' to go. * * * I read these things an' they make me think. A man ought to think if he can. * * * Oh, not tall talk, just what he could be doin' himself. I think how I might get into the scrap. I ought to ha' been in on the dock strike at San Pedro, but I wasn't. I don' want to miss another big fight like that, do I? * * *

TONY—You goin' in da jail, sure!

"THEY KNEW WHAT THEY WANTED"
Pauline Lord as Amy and Richard Bennett as Tony in a Scene From the Theatre Guild Production at the Klaw Theatre to Which the Pulitzer Prize of $1,000 Was Awarded as "the Original American Play Performed in New York in 1924 Which Best Represented the Educational Value and Power of the Stage in Raising the Standard of Good Morals, Good Taste and Good Manners."
(Bruguière.)

JOE—I could go worse places. A guy went to jail up in Plumas County a while back for carryin' a Wobbly card—like this one, see? (He displays the famous red bit of cardboard.) His lawyer pleads with the Judge to go easy on the sentence. "Your Honor," he says, "this chap served in France an' won the Croy de Gaire and the Distinguished Service Cross." An' right there the guy jumps up an' says: "Don't you pay no attention to that stuff," he says. "I don't want no credit for no services I ever performed for no gover'ment that tells me I gotta go to jail to stand up for my rights."

FATHER MCKEE—Do you want to go to jail?

JOE—There's worse places, I tell you. I been there before, too. * * * Tony says this is a free country. Well, Tony ought to know. He's a bootlegger.

TONY (indignantly)—Hah!

JOE—What I say is: About the only freedom we got left is the freedom to choose which one of our rights we'll go to jail for. (A motor car roars up to the house and stops.)

TONY—Shhh! Here's Amy! (Joe rises; Father McKee pauses in his harangue; Tony beams; Amy enters, her market basket hanging from her arm. She has stuffed some late lupin into the top of it.)

AMY—Scrappin' again, are you? Has Joe got another attack of the footitch? (She sets the basket down on the table and sees Joe's papers. Oho! So that's it. (Picking up the lupin from the basket.) See them, Tony? Ain't they sweet? They're so pretty they might be artificial.

FATHER MCKEE—We been talkin' about reformin' the social system.

AMY—Well, you got a fine day for it. Ain't the doctor come yet?

TONY—Doc don' come today.

JOE—He comes on Thursday.

FATHER MCKEE—Today's Wednesday.

AMY—Well, I never. Here they are reformin' the world an' they don't even know what day of the week it is. Ain't men the limit? Well, the world may need reformin', but I got no kick. The grapes are near ripe and ready for pickin'. It's gettin' cold in the mornin's and the nights is longer than they was. Downtown they're puttin' up the posters for the circus, an' I hear the show's goin' into Winter quarters just the other side of Napa. I guess that's all the remarks I got to make.

WHAT I THINK OF PELMANISM - By Judge Ben B. Lindsey

PELMANISM is a big, vital, significant contribution to the mental life of America. I have the deep conviction that it is going to strike at the very roots of individual failure, for I see in it a new power, a great driving force.

I first heard of Pelmanism while in England on war work. Sooner or later almost every conversation touched on it, for the movement seemed to have the sweep of a religious conviction. Men and women of every class and circumstance were acclaiming it as a new departure in mental training that gave promise of ending that preventable inefficiency which acts as a brake on human progress. Even in France I did not escape the word, for thousands of officers and men were Pelmanizing in order to fit themselves for return to civil life.

When I learned that Pelmanism had been brought to America, by Americans, for Americans, I was among the first to enroll. My reasons were two: first, because I have always felt that every mind needed regular, systematic and scientific exercise, and secondly, because I wanted to find out if Pelmanism was the thing that I could recommend to the hundreds who continually ask my advice in relation to their lives, problems and ambitions.

Failure is a sad word in any language, but it is peculiarly tragic here in America, where institutions and resources join to put success within the reach of every individual. In the twenty years that I have sat on the bench of the Juvenile Court of Denver, almost every variety of human failure has passed before me in melancholy procession. By failure I do not mean the merely criminal mistakes of the individual, but the faults of training that keep a life from full development and complete expression.

It is to these needs and these lacks that Pelmanism comes as an answer. The "twelve little gray books" are a remarkable achievement. Not only do they contain the discoveries that science knows about the mind and its workings, but the treatment is so simple that the truths may be grasped by anyone of average education.

In plain words, what Pelmanism has done is to take psychology out of the college and put it into harness for the day's work. It lifts great, helpful truths out of the back water and plants them in the living stream.

As a matter of fact, Pelmanism ought to be the beginning of education instead of a remedy for its faults. First of all, it teaches the science of self-realization; it makes the student discover himself; it acquaints him with his sleeping powers and shows him how to develop them. The method is exercise, not of the haphazard

JUDGE BEN B. LINDSEY

Judge Ben B. Lindsey is known throughout the whole civilized world for his work in the Juvenile Court of Denver. He says:

"The human mind is not an automatic device. It will not 'take care of itself.' Will power, originality, decision, resourcefulness, imagination, initiative, courage—these things are not gifts but results. Every one of these qualities can be developed by effort, just as muscles can be developed by exercise.

sort, but a steady, increasing kind that brings each hidden power to full strength without strain or break.

The human mind is not an automatic device. It will not "take care of itself." Will power, originality, decision, resourcefulness, imagination, initiative, courage—these things are not gifts, but results. Every one of these qualities can be developed by effort just as muscles can be developed by exercise. I do not mean by this that the individual can add to the brains that God gave him, but he can learn to make use of the brains that he has instead of letting them fall into flabbiness through disuse.

Other methods and systems that I have examined, while realizing the value of mental exercise, have made the mistake of limiting their efforts to the development of some single sense. What Pelmanism does is to consider the mind as a whole and treat it as a whole. It goes in for mental team play, training the mind as a unity. Its big value, however, is the instructional note. Each lesson is accompanied by a work sheet that is really a progress sheet. The student goes forward under a teacher in the sense that he is followed through from first to last, helped, guided and encouraged at every turn by conscientious experts.

Pelmanism is no miracle. It calls for application. But I know of nothing that pays larger returns on an investment of one's spare time from day to day.

(Signed) Ben B. Lindsey.

Note: As Judge Lindsey has pointed out, Pelmanism is neither an experiment nor a theory. For almost a quarter of a century, it has been showing men and women how to lead happy, successful, well-rounded lives. 650,000 Pelmanists in every country on the globe are the guarantee of what Pelman training can do for you.

No matter what your own particular difficulties are—poor memory, mind wandering, indecision, timidity, nervousness or lack of personality—Pelmanism will show you the way to correct and overcome them. And on the positive side, it will uncover and develop qualities which you never dreamed existed in you. It will be of direct, tangible value to you in your business and social life. In the files at the Pelman Institute of America are hundreds of letters from successful Pelmanists telling how they doubled, trebled and even quadrupled their salaries, thanks to Pelman training.

"Scientific Mind Training" is the name of the absorbingly interesting booklet which tells about Pelmanism in detail. It is fascinating in itself with its wealth of original thought and clear observation. "Scientific Mind Training" makes an interesting addition to your library.
